Not spicy enough I guess.

1. There is a business filing in Quebec (that's in Canada)
2. On that business filing are three stakeholders (people who own the company)
3. The first two are the guys who actually started Dominion.
4. The third is some faggot. Don't know who it is, but there's an address.
5. That address is very special, because not that many people have used it.
6. That address is connected to oil/natural gas extraction in Ukraine.

7. It is also connected to the government of Ukraine.

8. It is also connected to some of the biggest financial fraud in history.

9. The people who have, you might say, "hovered" around this address and the businesses that come out of it are the sort of people who would benefit from overturning an election in Ukraine.

10. Since Dominion was incorporated in Quebec, these same 5 or 6 people keep ending up with only one or two degrees of separation from Dominion related things.

You know what, I obviously got carried away here. It IS too much information. It's got to be one thing at a time, everytime. I overestimated the amount of exposure this got the first time around.

SHUT IT DOWN.

we're done here jannies

Dear Jannies,

Hillary Clinton and John Podesta have been trafficking children for use as sexual slaves for several decades now.

They coordinated this through a pizzeria in Washington D.C. and used coded emails to exchange information about their illegal sexual escapades.

This was known as "pizzagate" due to the choice of venue and constitutes one of the most vast and insidious conspiracies in the history of minecraft.

Take this information as you will...

Okay, since I have everyone's attention, then. Yeah, I know this is super autistic but please understand I'm not making these observations in a vacuum.

There was political escalation in Ukraine following the fall of the USSR. Oil and natural gas resources in Ukraine were coveted by the Soviets. Then they left and the Ukrainians had to figure out where they were going to get their energy.

This is not like riding out into the Wild West and building an empire from scratch. These were extremely valuable resources that had infrastructure in place already.

Furthermore, Russia is the biggest supplier of natural gas to Europe and, since forever, they were able to just run their pipes through Ukraine because it was a Soviet republic.

The general rule for Ukrainians is "the happier Russia is the cheaper your oil and natural gas is going to be." Russia could just shut the pipes down when they wanted something to happen.

Obviously, the way for Ukraine to get out of this situation is to become a net exporter. That's hard when half the country like Russia because they grew up in it.

You know who doesn't like Russia? People who aren't communists. Also Europe. There is a vested interest going across the whole of Europe to get a pro-EU government in place and the issue is that what's happening in the USA right now is horribly similar to what happened to Ukraine in 2014.

I've been trying to find a way to condense 30 years of history down into a boomer-ready document and it's fucking hard; not because I can't describe it but because attention spans are about as small as peoples' initiative these days.

Get your shit together people.

Here's a lengthy but very useful overview ca. 2003 of the resource issues in Ukraine before the Orange Revolution: <http://documents1.worldbank.org/curated/en/470031468113333786/pdf/420110UA0Gas0sector01PUBLIC1.pdf>

And a much shorter intro into the oil & gas sector, a must read: <https://docplayer.net/21424743-Ukraine-s-oil-and-gas-sector-an-emerging-opportunity-dr-jim-bown-energy-industry-consultant-general-director-the-deane-group-ukraine-kyiv-ukraine.html>
